FROM THE DIRECTOR

How do we accept life on life's terms when life sucks?

Anton Chekhov was a writer and a doctor during the 1892 cholera outbreak. He experienced a similar health crisis to the one we are in today which also included mass quarantines, face masks, fear, and uncertainty. And along with it, similar psychological, existential, and emotional ramifications. During the outbreak he wrote to a friend, "I feel lonely, tired and full of worry... My soul is exhausted." Five years later, he wrote Uncle Vanya and one hundred and twenty years after that, Aaron Posner handed me Life Sucks. I didn't feel a strong need to do this play when I first read it. I loved it, but it didn't call to me in the same way Aaron's Stupid Fking Bird did. And then the last two years happened, I re-read the play and it punched me straight in the gut.

Working on Life Sucks in the era of COVID, the characters seem like they could have walked right off the street and up onto the stage. They are in a crisis much like we are - their crisis simply being life. They don't know how to actualize their dreams or to articulate hope. Hell, they don't even know how they'll wake up the next morning. But they do. The past few years have been hard and quiet and painful. For all of us. They have been so utterly Russian. Personally, the only thing I could do at times was look at myself and laugh. That's Chekhov. He always finds us when we need a lesson in acceptance. He asks us to find the timeless, ridiculous comedy in dealing with the circumstances life has dealt us.

Life Sucks is both Chekhov's and Posner's medicine for us. Chekhov asks us to look at our absurdities, contradictions, complexities and longings with radical honesty and a hell of a good sense of humor and Posner has taken the healing a step further. Unlike in Uncle Vanya one hundred and twenty years ago, you're a character in Life Sucks tonight.

Thank you for coming to the theater today. This play can't happen without you. You will see why.

Q&A with Playwright Aaron Posner

LIFE SUCKS

Q What draws you to the work of Chekov?

A I love his plays, in all their elegant, awkward brokenness. They speak to me — which I don't always think is a particularly healthy thing. They are just such brilliantly constructed comic dramas about the difficulty and ridiculousness of getting through the struggles of everyday life. There is something about the way his people are so horribly stuck in their own issues and dilemmas that I find really moving. They are almost all trying to be their best selves and move forward in their lives, but most of them are failing at that most of the time. There is love and loss and longing and pain... but not a lot of hope. Because to have hope, you have to be able to imagine a realistic path forward towards what you want, and too many of his characters lack that essential skill. This harsh reality makes the plays extremely fertile playgrounds for engaging, frustrating, well-intentioned people striving endlessly to get that they want... and making very little progress. I find this kind of story sad, funny, and aching human.

Q What are you looking forward to with the Cygnet version of Life Sucks?

A I so enjoyed the version Robby and his whole team did of my play Stupid Fking Bird some years ago, I'm eager to see how he — and this unique, dynamic cast and design team — will reimagine the play for right now. The play is asking big, hard questions about how we live our lives in difficult times. So how the real world feels to the actors and the audience at this particularly moment really matters. The reality is, this play is very different from when I wrote it in 2015 because the world is so different. The issues that are most active in the minds and hearts of our audience will be very different. I will be eager to see where that leads the production, and how it will land with Cygnet audiences.

Q How has the pandemic altered or reinforced your own opinion on whether Life Sucks or not? Has it influenced your rewrite of the play this time around?

A Since I am answering these question while being sick with COVID, it certainly sucks a little right now! But no, not really, I guess I believe that life is complicated... and that we all live a lot of our lives standing at the corner of Suck and Not Suck, and have to choose which way to go every day. But sometimes those choices don't feel like choices at all, and sometimes they can be incredibly fraught. So I think the pandemic has just put one more challenge onto an already endlessly complicated playing field.

It has been fun to do some rewrites from hearing these marvelous actors, but I would say about half the rewrites are because I hear things different in the world now because of social/political realities, and about half is simply because I have gotten older and had had new experiences, and I am hearing conversation with actors that are brining up fertile territory for further exploration. I never think my plays are ever really “done”. At some point I just have to stop, and it gets performed or published, but the world lives on in me, and it is always a pleasure to get to go back and tinker around some and spend some time with new version of old friends, which is how I think about the folks who occupy this play.

Q Which character do you most identify with?

A Oh, the age old question! I might as well be honest, I identify in significant ways with nearly all of them. This is a very personal play for me, and there is a lot of me in it, lurking behind certain aspects of nearly every character, so it's honestly an impossible question to answer.

Have you ever been to a Cygnet performance in which high school students were its audience? They inhabit this theatre once a run on a Wednesday morning. Sitting amongst them a few years ago, witness to their laughs, squeals, and gasps, convinced me to include Cygnet Theatre's Education and Arts Engagement Program in my estate planning. Cygnet's exquisite storytelling needs to continue to be accessible to people much younger than my demographic long after I'm gone. So, it's important for me to know that San Diego's students can continue to be rapt in the always stunning, frequently astonishing, and sometimes shocking work produced by Cygnet's amazing artists, directors and designers.

ACTORS' EQUITY ASSOCIATION (AEA)

founded in 1913, represents more than 45,000 actors and stage managers in the United States.

Equity seeks to advance, promote and foster the art of live theatre as an essential component of our society. Equity negotiates wages and working conditions, providing a wide range of benefits, including health and pension plans. AEA is a member of the AFL-CIO, and is affiliated with FIA, an international organization of performing arts unions. The Equity emblem is our mark of excellence. www.actorsequity.org.

CYGNET THEATRE LAND ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Cygnet Theatre recognizes and respects that the land on which our theatre sits is the unceded homeland of the Kumeyaay Nation, who have been living time immemorial. As San Diego's first people, the Kumeyaay have faced violent efforts to separate them from their land, culture, and each other. We view acknowledgement as an important first step to build mindfulness and awareness. We find inspiration from this land and thank them for their centuries of stewardship.

“Provocative and brimming with life.”
-Talkin’ Broadway

By Tony Award-winner Quiara Alegria Hudes (In the Heights) and winner of the 2012 Pulitzer Prize for Drama, Water by the Spoonful.

Fearless, Groundbreaking Drama

WATER BY THE SPOONFUL

By Quiara Alegria Hudes
Directed by Meg DeBoard
Mar. 23 - Apr. 24

Somewhere in a chat room, recovering addicts keep each other alive. The boundaries of family and community are stretched across continents and cyberspace as birth families splinter and online families collide. A healing and heartfelt meditation on lives on the brink of redemption.
